I'd like the current development rules restricting the removal of significant trees to be reviewed. My opinion and experience is that they constrain reasonable development from occurring on land specifically designated for residential dwellings. I'd like to use a significant tree located on a property I own as an example. The tree is located at the rear of the property and prevents typical residential amenities from being developed. The councils response to a request to remove the tree is inconsistent and illogical which I believe is directly related to the confusing regulations related to significant trees.
