Thank you for letting me suggest some planning changes:

How do you intend rolling back urban infill that has decimated traffic throughput on every street where 1950's style housing blocks now have at least 2 homes on them and in many cases 2-story with no space to put a wheelie bin let alone a car parked off-street?

More trees and open space is a good idea. In the 1860's it was noted that cutting down the trees between Adelaide and Gawler was causing increased temperatures. Did we learn anything from this.

Apparently not.

It's lovely to have a say in our government but if the government does not like something it just legislates to get its own way. Example: The Thebarton Police Barracks site. Why wreck that historical site when the old Le Cornu site in Ashford is already cleared, available and centrally located?

The chattering classes may have a say but it's like talking to a brick wall.

Sincerely

Jeff Rondello
