Consultation for this very important review was bad at best. I was advised of my areas consultation meeting by email from your department one day after the meeting had been held. My council only informed residents of the proposed changes 9 days ago with what I call a very low level leaflet that lacked a lot of detail. I live in a character zone and have spent the better part of 8 hours over the last 5 days trying to get the portal to detail what our area will be subjected to. I followed your "searching for historic/character area statements...." but I got so far and it appeared that the Info sheet was missing the final steps. I had a number of attempts and all failed to provide me with any detail. I know how to search on a computer and was disappointed I could not get a result. I had heard from a number of external planners who experienced the same difficulty. There are number of reasons why the consultation period was way to short. My lack of success highlights the complexity of everything associated with the mooted changes. Most of the public will be totally unaware of the changes and are expecting the government to reduce infill, create more green space, better built design and less car parking congestion in ever busier streets. There are changes, but developers seem to be winning the war and in most areas there will be no improvement. This government is not listening to the people and has not addressed any of the critical areas of concern. One size does not fit all. We have lost way too much of Adelaides character already. Yes we need sensible infill, but not at the expense of FURTHER destruction of our Cities character.
